THE PORTAL

AL

WEAVER HIGH SCHOOL

HARTFORD CONNECTICUT

FOREWORD . . .

This being the first peacetime Portal in five years, there is little doubt as to what it represents. It stands as a token of gratitude that we did not have to drop diplomas to pick up guns or don nurses' uniforms. The blessing of peace is a priceless possession, and for it we certainly are thankful.

An even more important thought, however, is what lies ahead of us. With peace comes opportunity, and with the fulfillment of this opportunity will come prosperity. Within these covers lies the embodiment of a challenge calling upon us to perpetuate in time of peace the efforts to benefit our community and country, efforts once demanded by war.

Deeds done in peace lack lustre, for no medals are awarded as in war; nor will there be any Service Book for us to sign. Yet the world needs greater heroes now than it did during the war: the heroes who will make the peace lasting this time. There lies our task as we face the world. May some of our class be numbered among these heroes!

What occurs in the following pages, incidentally, is not entirely our fault. What you did to Weaver and vice versa we have tried faithfully to record with pen, camera, and paint brush. We hope you'll enjoy it. All names and places used in fun turned out to be real, our fact-finding board just informed us, and any resemblances to persons living or—graduating from Weaver are True Similitudes.

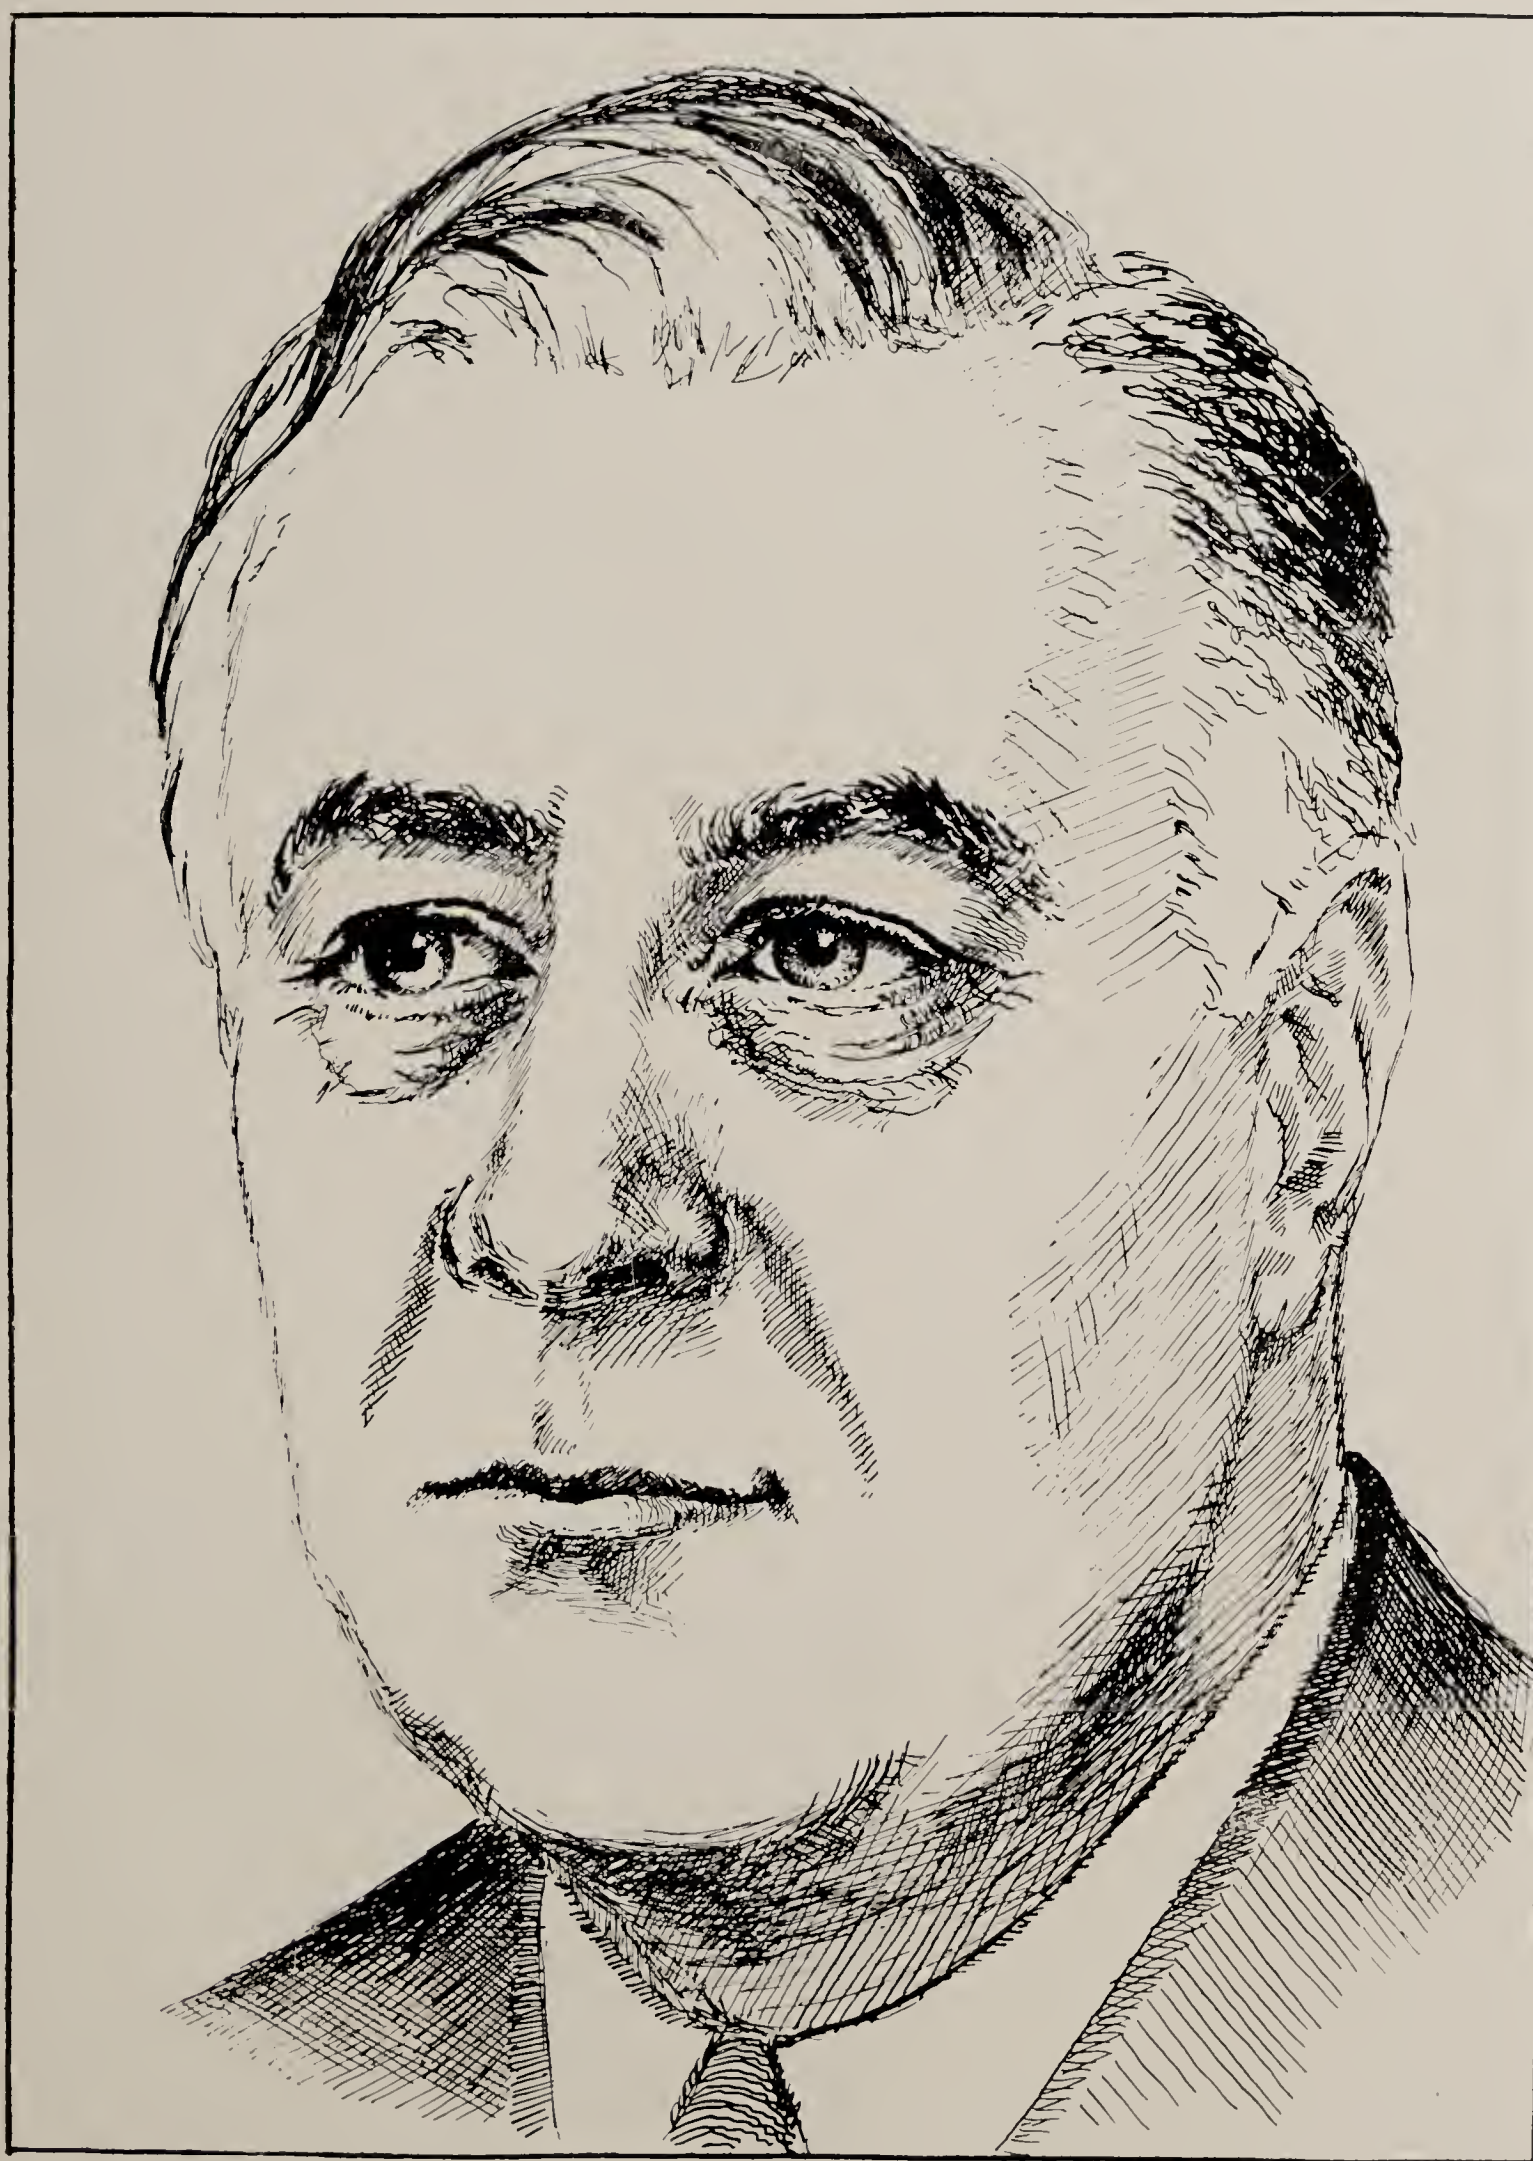

DEDICATION . . .

"The tumult and the shouting dies.
The captains and the kings depart:
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!"

—Kipling

To honor, thank, or reward all those who fought in battle and to do justice to those who gave their lives that others may live are tasks beyond the power of mortals. We can only faintly comprehend and mutely wonder at what these men and women have gone through. We lift our hands to salute them—and suddenly feel unequal to the task. Praises cannot be sung for such valor.

Yet lest we forget their mighty work, we humbly dedicate this book to all Weaver boys and girls who bravely carried the colors of their country in time of war. With equal reverence, we dedicate this book also to a leader of our nation, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, who gave his life that this might be a better world for us.

MR. FRANK H. BURKE

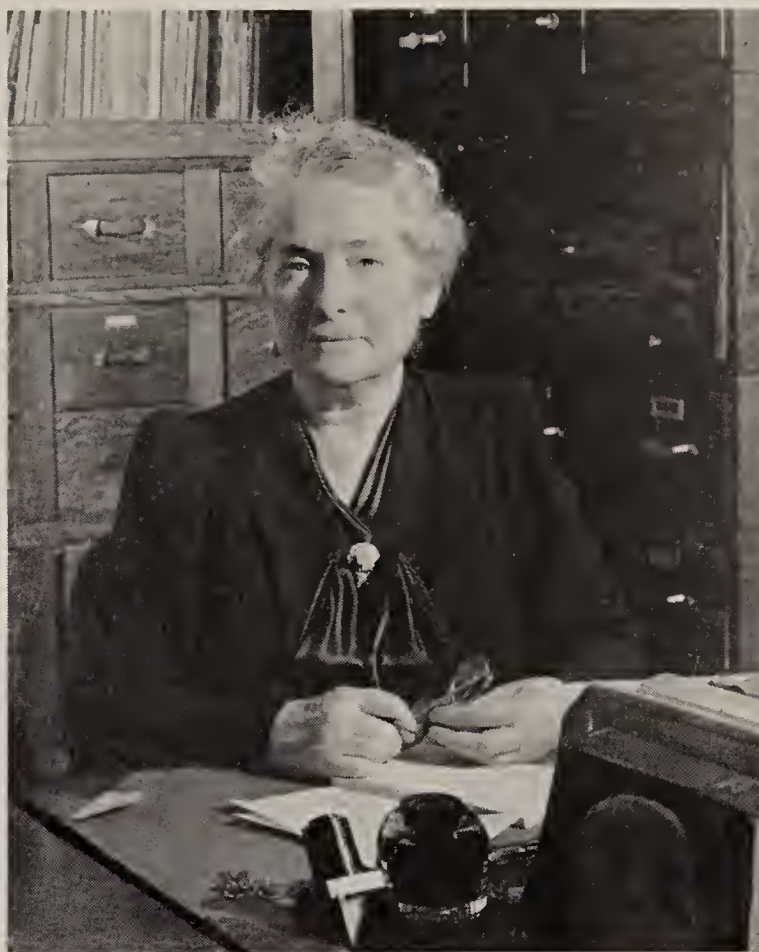

We shall always remember Frank H. Burke as a friend rather than as a principal. He came to understand nearly all of us in more than an impersonal manner. As we prepared to make a way for ourselves in the world, his patience and able guidance have helped us to stay firmly on our course. It is our hope that the good which he gave to us will return to him a thousand-fold.

Mr. Burke poses with Town Meeting speakers

Best Wishes, MISS TALCOTT

The Portal Board, on behalf of the student body and all former Weaver students, extends best wishes to you as you retire this June. May the future bring you the happiness which you so richly deserve after your years of devoting all your energy for others.

MISS FAITH H. TALCOTT

Dean of girls . . . shining example of a true lady . . . sparkling personality and a cheerful smile have been important factors in the accumulation of her many friends . . . offers guidance, understanding, and wisdom to every student . . . her competent leadership displayed in the enthusiasm and the successful growth of the Girls' League—through all Weaver's war effort, the service books on her desk have faithfully recorded the patriotic activities of the student body . . . we hope that those books will serve as an inspiration to us for continued community service, even though we shall not get our names in any book! . . . for her sincere efforts and service to our school, we will always remember Miss Faith H. Talcott.

WEAVER HIGH SCHOOL

Like a white ship astride a surging emerald sea, Weaver stands imperious, calm, yet responsive to the needs of the community. Active in war, she will continue her role in peace, training more and more citizens for the new world of peace. Looking back on our years at Weaver, we'll remember with nostalgia the little things which always loom so large—the excited chatter at assemblies, the enchantment at our Senior Reception, third lunch, our first days as wandering sophomores, seventh period in 240, the united spirit at football games—those things which made up our wonderful three years. Yes, we'll remember Weaver, with longing, with happy memories, with pride.

Whew, we just got out in time! Soon that seven minutes' gossiping time between classes will be only one of the many privileges which went out with the '46 era. Beavers equipped with roller skates and portable radios especially designed for listening to conversations while strolling through the corridors and with escalators at their command will have no possible excuse for being late to class! And what will become of the Big Green when the famed Weaver classroom easy chairs weaken the prowess of the team? Of course, our girls will valiantly go on playing hard to get, even after the television in the lunchroom, now manned by an efficient maitre d'hotel and a crew of waiters, has greatly broad-ened the minds of their admirers. But hark! We, the class of '46, maintain that there is one mechanism upon which no invention can improve—the swinging doors.

Sports 1943 - '46

The past three years have witnessed highly successful campaigns for teams representing Weaver's Green and White. Despite the occasional loss of star athletes to the armed forces, the Big Green squads have had very outstanding records during this time. Coach Gipson has turned out two excellent football teams, the 1943 aggregation which lost only a heart-breaking decision to H.P.H.S., and the 1945 eleven which breezed to an undefeated and untied record. The year 1945 also saw one of Weaver's greatest basketball teams fight its way into the finals of the CIAC championship only to be defeated in an overtime contest. That same Weaver team lost another extra-period game to be eliminated from the New England championship tournament in the Boston Garden.

The 1943-1946 period has also seen the revival of tennis and baseball at Weaver, and successful track and cross-country campaigns. The addition of Mr. Howard MacMullen to the physical education department has meant the beginning of an intra-mural sports program. On the whole, the past three years have brought an intensified interest in sports at Weaver.

Football

Establishing a mark for future Weaver gridsters to aim at, the 1945 Green and White eleven swept to the most successful football season in the school's history. Mixing a smooth running attack with precision-like passing, the Big Green, bolstered by eleven returning lettermen, preserved its undefeated and untied record by routing its arch rival, H.P.H.S., in the traditional Turkey Day Classic. Weaver's powerful combine averaged 37 points per game in racking up the impressive total of 222 points during the season, while an alert, hard-charging defense, led by Captain "Moe" Romano, held the opposition to a total of 25.

In its first showing, Coach Charlie Gipson's promising but untested array, maintaining a two-touchdown-per-period assault, easily downed hapless East Hartford High—55 to 7. The game, highlighted by Frank Toro's seven consecutive conversions, failed to provide a stern test for the Big Green but indicated the true potentialities of the squad. Hall, the next victim, threw a few scares into Weaver fans before bowing 31-12. The passing and running of Yaconiello and Sottile accounted for most of the yardage gained, while the fine, defensive play of Romano continually hampered Hall's running attack.

Playing its next contest against Leavenworth under a steady downpour which transformed the gridiron into a sea of mud, the Weaver squad relied mostly on the excellent defensive work of its forward wall and the devastating charges of Mangini and Grisevich through the outplayed Waterbury line to carry it to a 27-0 victory. The Beavers ran into some stern opposition at New London against a determined Chapman Tech squad before emerging with a 26-0 triumph. Finding their running attack stalled by the stubborn Whaling City eleven and a sloppy field, Weaver struck through the air for three scores and cornered their final T.D. on a brilliant 75-yard runback of an intercepted pass by "Moe" Romano.

In the annual Armistice Day clash with Bulkeley the Green and White met its first stiff test. Previous to this game, both teams were unbeaten, and Bulkeley's defense had not yielded a point. Weaver soon remedied that, however, by taking the opening kickoff and marching 78 yards for the only score of the first half. Bulkeley never threatened seriously after their sustained 84-yard drive in the second period was halted by the Beavers' brilliant goal line stand. Striking accurately and often through the air in the second half, Weaver racked up three more touchdowns to win handily, 25-0. For his magnificent work at passing and running, Leo Yaconiello was awarded the Conrose Trophy as the outstanding player on the field.

The Gipsonmen, winding up their season with a brilliant scoring spree, crushed their traditional foes, H.P.H.S., 58-6, in a display which netted by far the largest point total registered in the 22 year history of the rivalry. Out to avenge the heart-breaking defeats of the past three seasons, the Weaver gridsters ran roughshod over the Hilltoppers. The game progressed according to expectations, and at the end of the third period the Big Green held a respectable 25-6 lead. Then, exploding with startling suddenness, Weaver rolled up 33 points in rapid succession against the bewildered and demoralized Owls. In recognition of his sterling defensive play, lineman Romano was unanimously chosen as the recipient of the Conrose Trophy.

Yaconiello off again!

For the greater part of the season the starting line was composed of Griffith, Sklar, Saul, Jenks, Tosca, Romano, and Toro, who were ably relieved by Benson, Lester, Berard, Allen, Welson, and Stone. Yaconiello, Sotile, Mangini, and Grisevich formed the versatile backfield while Kone, Blesso, Rohrluck, and Lee also saw considerable action.

Congratulations are due Coach Gipson and the members of the team for this exceptionally successful season which saw Weaver annex the city title and win the Hartford "Times" trophy, symbolic of the district championship. Along with this praise go our best wishes for a victorious season to Captain-elect Tommy Lee and next year's squad.

Cross-Country

Hampered by the pre-season loss of three of its star performers, Coach Ralph Lund's cross-country team, although victorious only once, gave a splendid example of fortitude and determination in competing against the best harriers throughout the state. Dick Healy, Co-captain with Frank Patterson, was unable to compete owing to physical disability, while two other veterans, Dave Rice and Bill Smith, had donned the Navy blue.

Outstanding for Weaver were the Herculean efforts of diminutive Frank Patterson, who, in addition to placing seventh in the state meet and sixteenth in the New England event, finished first in every dual meet except against New Britain, where he ran a close second. His most prized personal triumph was crossing the finish line ahead of Roland Breaux, in the Hartford High meet. Unfortunately, this is Patterson's last year, but the Harriers are looking forward to a return to winning ways next season under the leadership of Co-captains-elect Albert Milner and Clifford Degan.

Basketball

In sports this year it's Weaver two to one! Following in the footsteps of their renowned football classmates, Weaver's Green and White hoopsters once again brought home the bacon by capturing their first city basketball championship in six years, and the first under the guidance of Coach Charlie Gipson.

Opening the season with a veteran squad, led by Co-Captains George Sottile and "Baldy" Griffith, Weaver's highly rated quintet looked unimpressive in beating Hall, Bulkeley, and East Hartford. Then, facing an inexperienced but determined Hartford High team, the over-confident Beavers went down to a humiliating 47-38 defeat. After drubbing Manchester, Weaver again collapsed before the onslaught of a smooth-working Bristol combine. After thumping a hapless Hall five once more, the Green lost an overtime contest to a Manchester team they had beaten by fifteen points less than two weeks before. Once again the Beavers were overpowered by Bristol, though they had a ten-point lead at half-time.

Suddenly, however, the team started to click. Victories were rolled up over New Britain, Bulkeley, Worcester Classical, and East Hartford to qualify Weaver for the C.I.A.C. tournament. Then, with the city title at stake, Weaver traveled to the enemy's home gym to meet their arch rivals, Hartford High. Putting up an amazing second half defense which held their opponents scoreless from the floor, the Beavers coasted to an easy 38-23 triumph. In the season's final, the Big Green warmed up for the tournament by trouncing West Haven for their sixth consecutive victory.

Although completing the season with an excellent record of 11 victories and 4 defeats, the team displayed only brief flashes of its potential power and ability, for the teamwork and spirit were not up to par at all times. Cool-headed, capable George Sottile was the mainstay of the veteran array. His sure ball-handling and accurate set shots pulled the team out of many tight spots. Teaming up with Sottile at the other guard post was "Big Boy"

Sherwin Welton, whose height and timely scoring snatched victory from defeat on several occasions. Center Frank Toro's frequent scoring sprees strengthened the team's offensive punch, while his height made him a valuable asset under the boards. Holding down the right forward position was dead-eye Bill "Baldy" Griffith, who seldom failed to score in double figures. Alternating at the remaining forward post were "Stan" Lester and the flashy "Tom" DeLuco. One of the factors in Weaver's successful season was an experienced and capable group of reserves, composed of "Bill" Braem, "Al" Kone, "Tommy" Lee, and "Bill" Newton.

STATE TOURNAMENT

Ranked eleventh among state class-A high schools, Weaver drew 7th rated Stratford in the first round. Holding true to form, the Big Green got off to a shaky start, falling behind 7-0 before the boys found the range. Inspired by the aggressive play of "Tom" DeLuco, the Beavers pulled away to a 13-10 half-time lead. Although never ahead by more than five points, Weaver retained the lead throughout the second half, and with four seconds to go, was on top 30-28. At that moment diminutive "Don" Costello, Stratford's star player and top scorer, let fly from the middle of the floor, and the ball dropped cleanly through the hoop just as the final gun barked. Then the boys had more than Stratford to fight against, for they were up against their old jinx, an overtime tournament contest. But the Green-shirted lads rose to the occasion and to the delight of the numerous Weaver rooters, DeLuco and Sottile racked up two quick baskets to insure a 34-32 victory.

In the quarter finals Weaver was paired with its regular season nemesis, Bristol High. Both clubs played listless ball during the first half with the Belltowners missing many ridiculously easy shots. The Gipsonmen didn't do much better, although they managed to walk off the court at half-time with a slim 16-13 lead. Nobody knows what happened to the Bristol players during the intermission, but they looked like an entirely different team the second half. Quickly tying the score at 18-all, Bristol bombarded the hoops from all angles to build up a 32-18 lead against a completely demoralized Weaver quintet which couldn't "buy" a basket. The gun brought a merciful end to the one-sided contest with the final score reading 35-20.

Perhaps the only consolation for Weaver was the fact that Bristol was defeated in the final by the defending champions, New Haven Hillhouse, which, in turn, went on to capture its second New England title in as many years at Boston!

BASEBALL

Coach Bill Waring's baseball team with a victory over Bulkeley High in the city series shows a record of one triumph and two defeats as the Portal goes to press. Well stocked with talent in the infield and the "garden", the main problem facing the team at the outset of the season was the lack of experienced batterymen. Owing to the loss of Harold Lewis and "Moe" Romano to the armed service and Norm Miller and Bill Braem through ineligibility, these two positions became wide open. Linden, Calloway, and Goldblatt have seen mound service, and Sullivan has done most of the backstopping.

The first base assignment is being handled by Frank Toro, with George Sottile, Dave Slitt, and Captain Dick Healy rounding out the infield. Moriarity, flanked by Griffith and McBrian, formed the picket-line.

Following two close defeats to outstanding Torrington and Hall High teams, the Weaver nine copped its first victory in quest of the city title. Calloway received credit for the triumph though he needed the aid of some fine relief pitching by Linden. Both Linden and Goldblatt have shown promise on the mound, and, with good luck, the Big Green can look forward to a successful season.

TENNIS

With the schedule half completed at press-time, the tennis season looks to be one of the brightest in Weaver history. Using two juniors, lettermen Epstein and Channin, in the first two positions and filling out the rest of the starting six with four seniors—Welson, Rubin, Riemer and Hellerman—Coach Andrews has piloted the team to triumphs in its first four starts. The Weaver netmen are given a good chance in the forthcoming CIAC championships where, in addition to the starting six, Art Lapp will see action.

The squad opened its defense of the city title with an easy 9-0 victory over H.P.H.S., achieved without the loss of a single set. Swinging into action with only a day's rest, the netmen scored successive victories over St. Thomas, 8-1, and Kingswood, 6-1. Playing its return game with St. Thomas under inclement weather conditions which forced postponement of some of the matches, the team left the rain-drenched courts with a 5-1 victory.

GOLF

The revival of golf at Weaver has seen the organization of a team which at present seems to be one of the better outfits in the state. Guided by Coach John Preu and led by co-captains Callan and Corrigan, the Weaver par-breakers have scored victories over Hall, Bristol, and Norwich. The triumph over Norwich marked the end of the Downstaters' victory string which had extended for ten years. Two close defeats, one at the hands of the crack Newington High team and the other inflicted under adverse conditions at Manchester, mar the otherwise clean record of the Weaver golfers. The team of Callan, Corrigan, Melanson, and Blesso is entered in the CIAC championship, May 27. Five more dual meets are planned, and a successful season seems assured.

TRACK

Weaver's trackmen, under the capable guidance of Coach Charlie Gipson, have thus far lived up to and even surpassed the promising early reports. The boys must be eating their Wheaties and spinach regularly, for the Green has shown unusual strength in the weight events, while holding their own in the running events. With the state meet at Yale and the Greater Hartford battle at Trinity being the only obstacles to a highly successful season, the Gipsonmen have swept one triangular meet with New Britain and Manchester, and dual contests against New Britain, Bulkeley, and a highly-touted Hartford squad.

The Green and White opened the season by placing fifth in the annual state indoor meet at Choate. Lester took first in the shot put, edging out New Britain's Sulima, last year's champ, while diminutive Frank Patterson took third place in the mile with a time of 4:49. Weaver also won third honors in the Class A and 1440-yard relays.

Patterson, Phillips, and MacDonald won firsts while Weaver swept the relay and high jump events to overcome New Britain, 44-24. Cagenello, Lester, Patterson, and Lassoff starred as Weaver wound up third in a field of six at the H.P.H.S. Indoor Invitational Meet. The Beavers pulled a big upset in the next meet by outscoring Hartford, $58\frac{2}{3}$ to $45\frac{1}{3}$, as they swept the relay, disc, and shot put events. Kone, Lee, and Lopez triumphed in the 100-yard dash, pole vault, and broad jump, respectively.

Once again the Gipsonmen made an excellent showing in the U. of Connecticut Relays at Storrs. Stan Lester and Herby Phillips took first and second, respectively, in the shot put, while the latter and Lorry Lassoff were one, two in the discus. Weaver entered two teams in the medley relay and, surprisingly enough, copped first and third places, the winning quartet being composed of MacDonald, Rohrlick, Antupit, and Patterson.

Stan Lester's long heave in the shot put, Phillips' first in the discus, and Patterson's winning effort in the mile, plus second places by Rohrlick (440 yd.), Sklar (javelin), Lassoff (discus), and Phillips (shot put), enabled Weaver to rack up 44.2 points, just enough to edge past New Britain (44) and Manchester (41.8) in a triangular meet on May 6.

At this writing, after having crushed Bulkeley, $80\frac{1}{2}$ to $23\frac{1}{2}$, by taking 9 out of 13 firsts and all but one second place, the Green and White tracksters are looking forward to a successful showing in the State Meet at Yale, and a climaxing repeat win in the Greater Hartford spectacle at Trinity on Memorial Day.

GIRLS' SPORTS

Girls' Sports for the year got off to a fast start in September with soccer speedball. This sport was welcomed enthusiastically by a great number of girls. The co-captains, "Angy" Schiavone and "Peggy" Magistri, were really very proud of their teams. The scheduled time was Wednesday and Friday before school, and Tuesday and Thursday after school. Believe it or not, before school proved the more successful! On hot muddy days and on cold frosty mornings the girls could be found on the football field in their dungarees and sweat shirts. The vigorous sport, the cause of many collisions, resulted in many a mud bath, and as often as not, some ambitious girl, intending to send the ball flying, would miss the ball but not her opponent! Many a girl was seen limping about school, but dauntlessly she would show up the next day, more eager than ever! Plenty of stiff competition was apparent to any observer, but good sportsmanship was always prevalent.

Although disappointed that the soccer season had ended, the girls were over-anxious to start the ever-popular basketball tournaments. Following the soccer schedule, every Wednesday and Friday morning, the early birds, divided into six teams, headed by Anne Flanagan, competed against each other with Jean Miele's team taking top honors. Tuesday and Thursday afternoons found co-captain Jesse-Jean Smith busy keeping her six teams happy although only two teams could play at one time. In this tournament, Lorraine Yacavone's team outscored the others. Despite a few casualties, (two sprained ankles, several bloody noses, and many black and blue marks) every one had a wonderful time and found it fully worth-while to lose a precious hour's sleep in the morning. The season wound up with a class tournament — Sophomores, Juniors, and Seniors competing against each other. No need to mention the winning team! Naturally the Seniors proved superior to the young and inexperienced lower classmen. (They'll have their chance!) All in all, the basketball season, ending altogether too soon, was a huge success.

Weaver girls hard at play

Looks like a strike!

The spring of 1946 found many girls eager to participate in spring sports. The successful season began with volleyball, headed by "Angie" Schiavone and "Frannie" Salvatore. Praise be given to those energetic girls who set the alarm for six o'clock so as to be on the volleyball court by seven forty-five; and some credit is due to those who set the alarm for six, but never quite made it! After all, the spirit was willing! Volleyball was also played after school, when it seemed to appeal to more of the girls! (Could the reason be that they needed their beauty sleep or that the fellows also practised their spring sports after school?)

When volleyball ended, softball began. Again, in the wee hours of the morning, half-wakened girls were seen wending their way towards the gym. A few moments later, out they came fresh as daisies in their blue and white gym suits, ready to take positions for an invigorating game of softball. Many girls would have been willing to come after school also, but co-captains Inge Seaman and Eleanor Hayes decided that it would be better to play only in the morning since the afternoon sun would probably burn the players to a crisp!

Spring sports also included archery, badminton, and tennis, headed by Janice Senkel and Betty Hagan, Mary Bonadies and Glenna Fitzgerald, Marilyn Engel and Dolores Koplowitz, respectively. Many enthusiastic sports fans turned out for these three activities.

SPORTS NIGHT — 1946

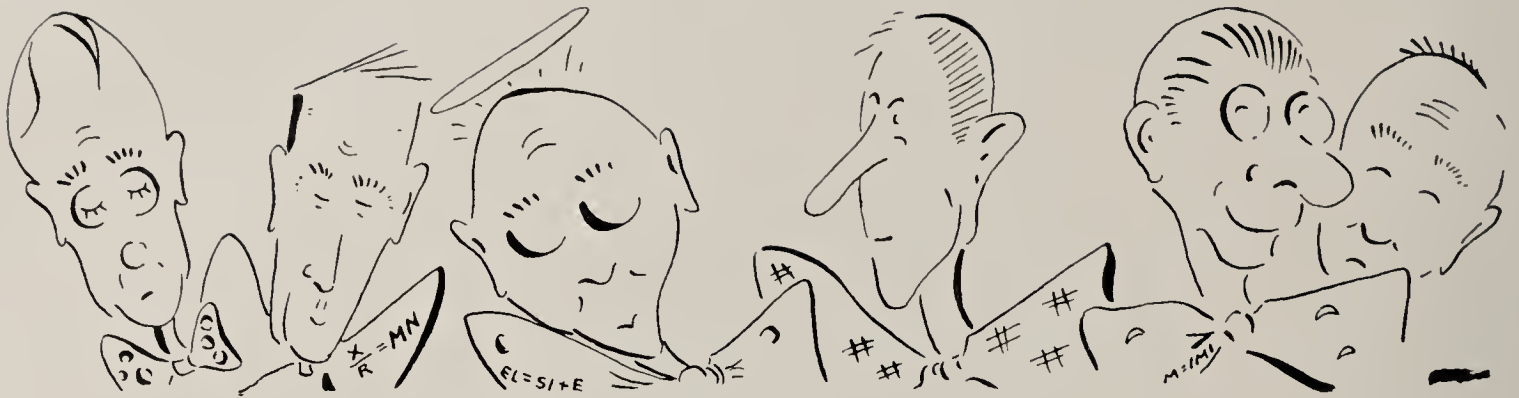

On May 10, the second annual Sports Night, long looked forward to by all Weaver girls, took place. Early in April the captains, Jean Lombardo of the Blue team and Mary Premo of the Green, began organizing their teams with assistant captains Jean Miele and Kathleen Cahill, respectively. Elsie Colandro was chosen chairman for Sports Night.

After weeks of hard work and hours of practice, the big night arrived.

Songs and cheers were given, followed by contests in shuffleboard, ping pong, bowling, and volleyball. Exercises, tumbling, and stunts were exhibited. A novelty feature called "Dress the Dummy" aroused the excitement of all, both participants and spectators. Finally a basketball game concluded the program.

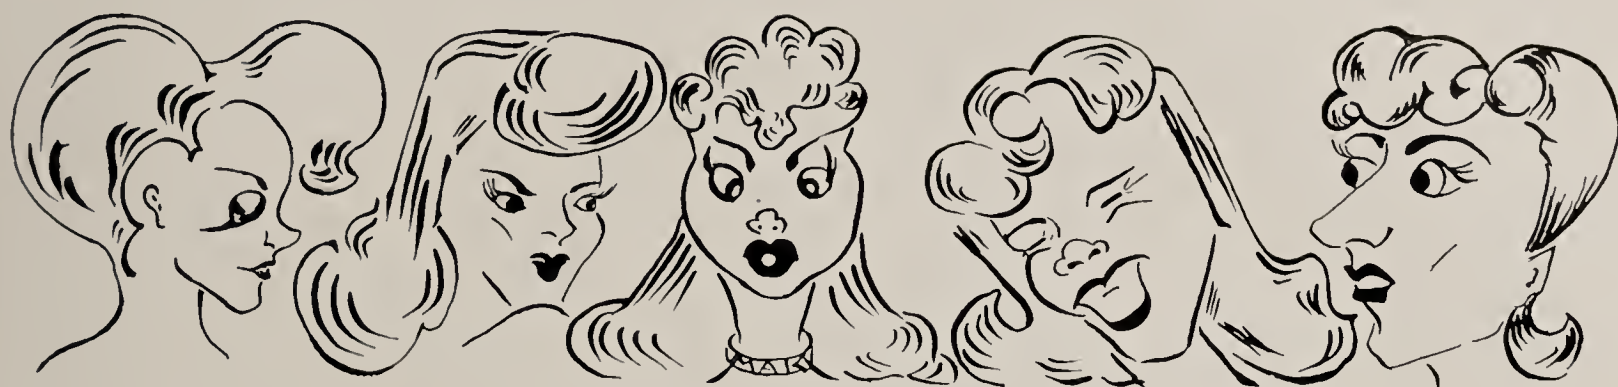

THE GREEN TEAM HAD WON! The coveted plaque was presented to the captain of the victorious Green team, which had also won Sports Night in 1945. Although the Green team had won, the Blue team had put up a good fight and had not for a moment lost its spirit. This commendable spirit will, we expect, evidence itself next year again when the Blue team will compete with the Green for the possession of the plaque.

Class History

The great invention

Being an average Weaver graduate, I, after translating Crowell's "Trials and Tribulations" from Greek into Latin, decided to read Einstein's "Theory of the Fourth Dimension" for a little relaxation. It must have been during the sixth or seventh chapter that I dozed off into the dream of which I am about to tell.

It was late at night, and I was ready to try out, once again, my invention, on which I had been working feverishly for months. This machine, if it worked, would convey me through the fourth dimension and place me in any period of time which the dial indicated. Making a last check on all adjustments, I set the dial for 1943 and turned on the current.

My prayers were answered, for I was rising above the world of three dimensions and entering a new realm. In this strange and contorted space I could see all the events of time eternal taking place with no regard for consecutiveness or development. Everything was happening at once! Suddenly everything went green, and after reviving from my brief unconsciousness, I found myself in front of the building in which I would spend most of my hours for the next three years.

Boy, was I proud to enter school that morning! I strutted all over the place. Gee, I thought those Juniors and Seniors were stupid! They didn't even know where the gym was, for I was told it was in the north part of the building!

Another thing which puzzled me was the lunch schedule. That first week I had a total of nine lunches. Other than that the only other mishap occurred when some Junior tried to sell me a half interest in one of the chairs in the enclosed south section of the lunchroom. How was I to know that that place was where the teachers ate? The very next day I had a little talk with Mr. Burke.

Being very ambitious and not having learned what happened to Caesar for being so, I decided to try out for "The Lookout". I was very disappointed when I didn't make Editor-in-Chief, but still determined, I accepted the job of Assistant Circulator's Assistant. I was to polish the knob which the Assistant Circulator turned so that the Circulator might enter a room.

Nevertheless, I was still proud to be a Weaver student, for Weaver was a great school. The first incident proving this was the metamorphosis which occurred in the Weaver green. It had turned red, white, and blue in the patriotic effort of surpassing the quota of $10,000, set by Mr. Burke, by three times that amount! We were praised by Washington officials in the Congressional Record, and lauded by the Treasury Department.

On September 27, quite by accident, I attended the Senior-Sophomore assembly for girls. I nearly stole the show from Betty Askinas, who was greeting us Sophomores. But my real mistake came when I tried out for football. Oh, what exercises! After the first hour of strenuous training I began to hear heavenly music. No, I wasn't unconscious; it was the band which was soon to play as Leo Yaconiello and I charged through the lines to score for dear old Weaver. Leo, incidently, was the first Sophomore to have the honor of being included in the Scoop, along with Mr. Carrier. In our first game we defeated Woodrow Wilson, 24-12.

The battle is on

An "A" assembly

The Weaver green was also turning khaki, for many students were entering the Army, and although I hate to mention the color (it reminds me of a certain other school) it was turning blue (Navy blue, that is). Weaver was certainly doing her part in the drive for victory, for some had even given their lives for their country as the memorial of gold stars in the school lobby showed. Every week, new names were being added to the service flag.

This was the year in which Mr. Fox retired. At the time I did not realize that he was practically the main spring of the school. However, I guess he "wars". And speaking of WARS, I must mention the Weaver Auxiliary Rationing Squadron. I had forgotten to say that in 1943 the subject of rationing was almost as popular as Frank Sinatra. When the lack of sugar, gas, and butter was mentioned, the typical comment was "Oooohhhh" but it was said with more feeling when Frankie was being discussed. The boys thought this was disgusting!

In October we outran Middletown and beat East Hartford in football. But that game was spoiled for me when, coming off the field, I heard, "Stop winking at the quarterback, mother; he's not making those passes at you!" This was the month when I decided to buckle down and study. I pondered over Shakespeare, Silcus Marner, Quentin Durwood, and Lana Turner, for I was taking English, economics, and was preparing for astronomy (you see the stars only come out at night!) and the forthcoming geometry course. Geometry, of course, meant studying curves and knowing all the angles.

Alex Diachenko, an alumnus of Weaver, posthumously received the Silver Star for "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity". He was a former captain of a Weaver football team and would have been proud to see us defeat Hall by 7-0. With this game we maintained our undefeated record. The month of November brought with it the scholastic honor roll, and for the first time in their lives, twenty-six Sophomores were able to make it at Weaver. Ah, Turkey Day! We were sure to beat Hartford after the trouncing we gave Leavenworth. But alas, after the game was over, I slowly walked to the Connecticut River Bridge and was just about to jump when I remembered I hadn't eaten yet—so I returned home.

December proved to be an eventful month. It marked the 2nd year of war; a war which took our friends and the kids in our classes and put them to the test of defending their country and gaining a peace which would enable future generations to live without fear of war. This month also marked the Goodwill Formal. This was a big success not only because the band was that of a Weaver student, Jerry Kay, but also because the many that attended had a swell time. Then, too, Christmas vacation was coming! This meant no school, turkey dinners, no school, movies, and no school!

Coming back was a tough task, especially since I hadn't quite recovered from the headache I had on Jan. 2. You see on New Year's Eve, and New Year's Day I had gotten right into the "spirit" of things. At the end of December we played Hall High and because I did not attend the game, I did not know the good news until I returned to school. We made so many baskets during that game that the spectators thought we were using a loaded basketball. It was about this time that the favorite tune "Hand me the hammer, mother; there's a fly on junior's head" was released to the public.

It was now 1944 and January had passed on fleeting wings. The month of February will probably remain in the minds of all Weaver students for two reasons: first, it was the twentieth anniversary of the school, and second, on February 17 "The Lookout" published a picture of the faculty, taken when the school was founded! Then too, the news came out that we had once again completed the War Loan Drive with nearly three times the quota. During this fourth drive we bought $66,007.85 worth of bonds and stamps.

I hate to mention it, but we had poor luck in basketball that year. We lost practically all of our games!

Incidentally, Mr. Fox's place was taken by Mr. Williams, who in the manner of his predecessor took jaunts through the building and cared for the physical maintenance of the school.

On February 14 the Service Flag was presented to the school by the Girls' League at an impressive assembly.

We partially settled our debt with Hartford High when we took away the city championship by defeating them 45-41 in basketball. This made Bulkeley High the city champions! At this time Armand Korzenik of Weaver easily won over the other contestants in the city in the Oratorical Contest sponsored by the American Legion. Speaking of oratory, it takes quite an elocutionist to sing the song which was the rage that month. It was "Mareseatoats and Doeseatoats and Littlelambseativy"!

In April a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of baseball and cross-country. This was also true of Weaver boys even though they are so exceptionally studious. As for myself, it was about this time that I became interested in the band. You see, I had been taking trumpet lessons from a private tutor. On April 10 Weaver played host to orators from many states in the Legion Contest. They threw me off the stage when I recited:

"Roses are red and violets are purple,
Sugar is sweet and so's maple surple."

That month also brought the pictures of us Sophs. Gosh, we looked "purty"! I was quite disappointed with mine until I found out that it was printed upside down. Tennis was coming in about this time. But this didn't stop any of the students from remembering their old love matches. And speaking of matches, twelve Sophomore girls must have had a hot time while ushering for the Junior Prom.

Towards the end of the year I saved up some money so I could rent a Portal of 1944 from a senior to see what was in it. When I received the book, I wept for joy, and my tears splashed down on a little beaver inside the cover of the book. When he smiled at me (for he liked the water) I stopped—Lo' and behold! It was Ipse Beaver. It was here that I first met a companion with whom I spent the rest of my high school life.

May and June of that year seemed the longest months in my life, for I wondered whether I was going to pass or not, and wished that summer was over so I could start beavering again!

The last week in June I mentally relived my Sophomore year, and considered that I really hadn't been through many hardships. I hadn't had any study halls or demerits, just fourteen ciphers!

It's a plane!

It's a bird!

No! it's a Weaver Beaver!

CLASS HISTORY (Junior Year)

After a boring summer vacation of swimming, fishing, playing basketball and baseball, and loafing (you see, I worked in a bakery), I decided, with a little help from my parents, to come back to school. Being a junior, I knew all the ropes (and swinging doors). This time I had the correct number of lunches and got to my classes on time. Having sold my half interest in that lunchroom chair to a third, I made up my mind to live up to the name of Weaver Beaver. I joined the band immediately, and because I played a mean harmonica the other kids elected me chief of the mouth organ section. Informed that we would play at the football games, I told Charlie Gipson that I would have to leave the team.

Although I was a high and mighty Junior, I made one mistake and that was how I found out that the school had a new girls' physical education teacher, Miss Whitney. She let me off easy though, saying that she had better not see me there again. Was I humiliated!

The Junior girls were furious when they were not invited to see the female prestidigitator, Marie Elena, who captivated everyone at the Sophomore-Senior Girls' League assembly. Our first two football games of the season resulted in ties, but Hall High pulled a sneak attack when they defeated us in the next game by 7-6. I received this news second hand, for I did not attend the tragedy. I had stayed home to listen to a new program which had recently inhabited the air waves. It was "Marie's Other Husband", sponsored by "Drawrof" which, when spelled backwards, is "Forward".

Since my voice was still changing, I did not sing with the All-State Choir, led by Nobel Cain. This group sang at the State Teachers' Convention, which was nearly blown to oblivion by a well placed bomb. Authorities found the explosives, but they haven't caught me yet.

In return for the Hall game, we beat East Hartford and followed up by trimming the shoulder pads off the Leavenworth team. But Armistice Day brought sad news to Weaver fans, for Bulkeley defeated our Gipsonmen. This was too much for me. The next day I gave notice to Mr. Green and reapplied for admission to the football squad. At the same time the Weaver harriers finished third at the state meet at the University of Connecticut.

Also about this time, Mr. Burke delivered a speech at the dedication of the Northwest Honor Roll. Considering this and the fact that Weaverites answered the call of the Sixth War Loan Drive by bringing in four times the quota set, we surely had proven ourselves worthy of our Minute-Man Flag and faithful to our Service Flag. I was almost represented on that flag. I had gone down to my district draft board and had tried to enlist. After taking my physical, I was informed that I was 4-G (gruesome, gawky, grotesque, and good for nothing). According to this classification, I would be taken after women and children!

On November 18, a world shaking event took place. It was to spell the downfall of Weaver. Yes, I had caught a cold and was not able to play in the Turkey Day Classic. Although we lost the game, two of our "boys" were chosen for the all-city team, Romano and Toro, tackle and end, respectively.

December of that year was a hard month. I really Beavered! My three languages bothered me most. English was tough because we had to do so much extra reading. I remember one book about appendicitis which we had to read on the side. French bothered me because I somehow had been put in a German class. And although you may not think that geometry is a language, it was Greek to me!

January brought the announcement that a U. S. destroyer had been named for Alex Diachenko. We, from that moment on, adopted her and took her under our wing. Speaking about wings, "Moe" Romano must have been floating on air when he found out that he was to be the captain of the football team for the 1945 season. But for now, football was fading out and basketball was taking its place. We got off to a mixed start by beating Hall and by losing to Bulkeley.

This month I eased up on my studies to get in a little ice skating. On cold winter nights the Keney Park pond house is more popular than Maxwell's. I used to go on Saturdays to skate for hours on end. Bristol was next on the list of the victorious Weaver five, with H.P.H.S. still having to pay for that unsettled Thanksgiving Day score. We were knocking them off one by one; East Hartford came next, then W. Haven.

On the eve of March 9 the Girls' League presented Weaver Night, which had as its theme the United Nations. I had the best time of my life at that presentation. Besides having a whopper of a time, I also sold 274 bags of popcorn and five salted peanuts.

March was a busy month. Another big event occurred which I will always remember. It was the Weaver-Hillhouse game for the C.I.A.C. class-A championship. But fate was against us, for we lost in the overtime, 32-28. On March 2, Bob Sisk took second place in the American Legion Oratorical Contest, with Armand Korzenik coming in first. I went to hear those finals and when I mounted my soap-box someone, seeing that it was a Swan soap-box, said that you could break it in two and use half in the kitchen and half in the bathroom. Little did they realize that I was only going to make a plea for the thousands of juniors who would soon be seen with their left arms in slings. It was the tuberculin tests. These injections must have been vitamin loaded because, soon after taking the test, juniors began to come into prominence. The Junior Prom was approaching, 21 juniors were elected to the Honor Society, George one of the greatest presidents of the United States, and certainly one of the world's greatest humanitarians, passed away. Hearing the voice of Franklin Delano Roosevelt was a thrill that we may carry all through our lives.

I cannot pass April, however, without whistling, . . . I mean thinking about the Seventh War Loan Drive. We met our goal of $20,000 with money to spare. Just think, Weaverites could have bought 200,000 ice-cream sodas, or 15,000,000 sticks of Chum Gum, if they had not realized the importance of buying bonds and stamps instead!

About this time Mr. Price, music director of the Hartford schools, announced that he would retire on July 1.

But I finally got a chance to rest, for the long-awaited spring vacation came. I did nothing but eat, sleep, and think of the coming baseball season.

On May 8, the war-torn world received the news that Germany had surrendered. This, however, did not mean the end of the war, and so, I still kept my ration books as well as my textbooks.

About this time, Elsie Colandro was elected president of the Girls' League. Again, another year was coming to a close. Taking inventory, I discovered that I had entirely escaped ciphers, but I had spent so much time after school I had to have my suppers brought to me from home. Resolving to do a better job next year, I regretfully left Weaver to grapple with that boring vacation.

Sottile and Bill Griffith were named co-captains of the basketball team, and four juniors won prizes in a state-wide art contest.

April, too, hadn't enough days to hold all of the activities scheduled for it. The A Cappella Choir sang at the West Middle School on April 25 to be followed later by the choir of the three high schools which sang on May 18 at the Bushnell Memorial. But I didn't bother with that, for I was going to the Junior Prom April 20 with the most gorgeous blonde in all Podunk. She was chosen Miss Gravel Gertie of 1939, defeating all other candidates, including Gertie herself, by a large margin! The theme of the Prom was the Home Garden of America, and Gertie came to the dance complete with rake and hoe.

April 12 brought to the whole world one of the most tragic events of the war. Perhaps

CLASS HISTORY (Senior Year)

In anticipation of my senior year, I thought I'd get out of the fourth dimension and spend the summer of 1945 in reality again to regain my energy. I reached down for my portable PORTAL switch on my belt and—W-O-O-O-SH! Ah-h! Back on terra firma. I looked for my One-A-Day pills, since I'd need a heavy supply to take back with me. Thus fortified, I set the dial on my time machine (Dave Reiner beat me to Washington, and holds the patents on this thing, incidentally) and once again on the golden wings of the D. R. version of "Let Dewey Do It", I went up, up, up, through the terror-sphere of time and space to the educational annex of Keney Park, dear old W. H. S.

Just made it! First day of school September 1945. I was looking at the blackboard for my initials when along came a Sophomore. "That's right, son; the gym is in the north part of the building," I told him. I dropped in on the "A" assembly on September 18, not that it was compulsory or anything! It was just that I liked to hear Mr. Burke speak. I couldn't hear very well up there in the "third" balcony, but I know Mr. Burke gave thanks for world peace. Then he said something about getting down to work . . . something about everyone having 96 averages. . . . He was a great speaker, that Mr. Burke. I bet he could have done something with those American Legion contests. Assemblies at Weaver were something. They sometimes saw that the Weaver wolves—er, Beavers, were made happy by showing the girls the latest fashions. I slept overnight in the auditorium since I wanted a good seat at the Girls' Senior-Soph Assembly on the 18th of September. I hoped to see Mrs. Lyman run off her monologue on radio artists. Besides, they told me that Elsie was going to welcome the Sophs.

On October 19 I rented a tux and went to the Art-Crafts Club dance. I just adored that Cagenello fellow and his sweet-tweets, the Downbeats. I didn't think Bill would mind if I took Marge. (I had black eyes for weeks afterwards!)

Previous to this I had gotten into a whole mess of trouble. Mr. Burke began that new fire drill system. I was supposed to be walking towards Oakland Ter., but all the South exits were closed, so I found myself on Westbourne Pkwy. But I solved everything. When Trophy because he was better looking than I. Oh well, even though I was ineligible on Thanksgiving Day because we could have only eleven men on the team, the turkey still must have tasted like owl to those poor H. P. H. S. inmates. Ah! Sweet Revenge!!!

(This dab-fad time machine is out of order!! Now I'll have to go back a month. Dave's inventions never work!)

On October 26 I tooted with the rest of the Weaver group in the All-State Band at the Bushnell for the State Teachers' convention. (I still can't figure out why "Izzy" had a machine-gun in his trombone case!)

Catching up on time again, I was the star of Weaver Night on November 16. The theme was Thanksgiving, and in all modesty, I yet remember how I stole that show. A cast of 200, but my name was the only one on the marquee outside the auditorium. In the first act I sang the aria from the "Weaver Shop's Bedlam" entitled "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes". For some reason or other the curtain fell down in the middle of my high C above the high C that Jesse sang that night. Then I was followed by a couple of intermission acts: A Puritan skit, some painters, a dance band, a fashion show, the airplane club, tumblers, a trio of singers, and finally a play. (At least that's what the program called it.) At the end I came on again. This time I sang a piece with an accentuated pistachio and an accelerated vibrato which was called "Chickery-Chick". The audience rose to its feet as one, so I said, "O.K. Mother; let's go home".

The next few weeks I helped Mr. MacMullen get the intra-mural sports organized. After that I ran a black market in G.I. socks and sweaters.

On November 28, I decided to organize my Optical Illusion Company along with the rest of the Junior Achievement businessmen. On November 29 I was bankrupt, but the others made out all right.

When the Goodwill Formal came around, I waited to be invited. After all, there were 249 senior girls, and only 200 senior boys, so I could afford to relax. Later other

Mr. Gipson's gym class came running by, I ran along with the boys, to get to Greenfield St. (I told my father that the resulting two weeks' suspension was an early Christmas vacation!)

Through the late fall months I had a terrific football season. Moe Romano played a great game, but I still should have won the Conrose Trophy on Armistice Day. Yaconiello was lucky, too, on Turkey Day. I had the trophy coming to me on that day also. But Bill Griffith took the cake. I had amassed a total of 61 points, but they gave him the Times fellows told me it was a nice affair, and that Santa Claus was there (weren't you, Matthew?). Tony Frank and his band provided the music, and everyone had a good time. The crowd arrived at 9 o'clock, took off their wraps, then put them on again after going through the reception line, and spent a pleasant evening dancing at Wright's in Plainville and eating at De Pasquale's on Front Street. On December 18 I attended the A Cappella Choir Christmas Concert (the A. C. C. C.) which was a very pleasant experience. The Girls' League Christmas Carol Assembly was held three days later. On January 7, I was dismissed early as I was rushing to hear the Don Cassock sing at the Bushnell. I sat in the west loges and waved at my girl friend in the east loges. The lights went out when I was hit by a flying "bagel", and I came to on January 11 at one of those famous "Charm" assemblies at the high school. I was still quite dizzy when I remarked to some big person sitting next to me that we sure would have a polite class. As he didn't answer, I socked him on the shoulder—good and hard! Today the imprint of my fist is still on the pillar of the far side of the auditorium.

On February 6 I received the shock of my life! Here I was so devoted to Miss Hogan of the office staff, and she ups and marries another man and leaves Weaver. Oh, "Hence vain deluding . . .!"

A few days later with tears of bitter remorse (salty, that is) I crept to the window in the library when Miss Hazelton wasn't looking and watched the sixteen smartest students of the class leave at the half year. They knew what they were doing, tho', for there was a "Good Grooming" assembly coming on February 11.

I went to the Bushnell on the 12th to hear the Cleveland Symphony orchestra perform. This time I sat in the east loges and waved to my girl in the west loges, etc., etc.

The following day I stuffed the ballot boxes and got Charlie elected president of the class. (As a reward, he let me sweat it out over this fab-daddled class history!)

The night after that I went down to call the square dance at the first Girls' and Boys' Leaders' Corps Party. On February 18 the Record Club was born, with its aim to collect all the "Woody" Herman records of "Caldonia" in existence. Just about that time our sparkling basketball team took the city championship.

In the following month of March, Bob Sisk, let the winds out of the bag and took the city prize in the American Legion Oratorical Contest. Shortly afterward the Junior Town Hall of the Air presented a broadcast from the Weaver auditorium stage. Mr. Winslow and I were justly proud of "Larry" Rustein as he pounded the table and contradicted even the announcer when he said, "W-T-H-L-S-M-F-T"!

With Spring at its height, Al and Berny got out the cards, and we skipped classes to play setback in Keney Park. As the months passed one by one, I watched the tennis and track teams bear the Weaver green forward.

The band presented a wonderful concert on April 24 after being set a good example by the Ithaca College Band at Bulkeley on April 10. The A Cappella and Senior Choirs followed up with nice performances under Mr. Hintz, climaxing an ever-pleasant music season.

The night of June 18 lives in infamy with the Ides of March, for that was Class Night. Enough said?

But I composed myself and made a big night of the Senior Reception which came on the following Saturday. Minerva and I had the most wonderful time, me in a white dinner jacket and she in a potato sack.

Finally on the 16th of June I sat in the audience of weeping mothers at the Bushnell and watched my class graduate. Tears flowed like wine as four hundred pardons—er, releases—er, diplomas were handed out for Free! But I purposely flunked my Senior Math, so that I might spend another year at Weaver!

At this point, my dream ended. With a start, I leaped up from my couch to go to the time-machine. But it wasn't there! Sadly I walked to the bookcase and took out my musty old PORTAL of 1946. That was the only way I had of remembering what the old school was like. For during the intervening years, by this time, Weaver had expanded. There were dormitories in the park with outdoor classes, and even—yes, a flying school.

But that's the way life is. I had lived my high school life, and all that's left is a dream. . . .

Clubs and Activities

Mr. Larrabee's class editing physiology reports

During the war years, the clubs and activities of Weaver devoted most of their time to war service. They sold stamps, collected waste paper, helped with rationing and air raid drills, did work for the blind, served as Bluebirds at the local hospitals, and put in hours at numerous other tasks. Now that peace has come, the many clubs have returned to their programs of providing extra-curricular training and entertainment in their various fields. Let's take a look at their records.

ART-CRAFTS CLUB

Under the guidance of Miss Helen Haselton, the Art-Crafts Club has had a very active school year. Portraits and caricatures of various students and faculty members have been executed at the meetings. A chosen few of these have been on display in the lobby! The members have also competed in the national Scholastic Art Contest, with good results. Encouraged by the success of their Weaver Night skit, the Art-Crafts Club is planning a puppet show, based on modern French painting.

BIOLOGY CLUB

The Biology Clubs are comprised of students taking the course. The two clubs are under separate supervision, Miss Catherine Hubbard and Miss Jenette Bodurtha advising the Girls' Biology Club, and Mr. Russell Baker, the Boys' Biology Club. The members have discussions and debates; movies concerning biology often are shown. Although most new members are sophomores taking biology for one year, students frequently remain in the club for all three years.

BOYS' LEADERS' CORPS

The Boys' Leaders' Corps, organized this year, is under the direction of Mr. Howard MacMullen, assistant physical education teacher. The Leaders assist in gym classes and sponsor after-school activities. This new organization was initiated at a party given by the Girls' Leaders' Corps. The progress of the Boys' Leaders' Corps shows much promise, largely owing to the enthusiasm of James Edwards, this year's president.

CAMERA CLUB

The Camera Club, with Mr. Frank Van Schaack as faculty adviser, provides training and experience for those interested in photography. Not only are lectures on technique given by president Leonard Hellerman, but dark-room experiments are also conducted by all the members. The Camera Club holds frequent contests, the results of which may be seen on display in the library. Such a club makes experienced photographers available to the school publications now, and many former members have gone on to successful careers in the business world.

CAROLINE HEWINS LITERARY SOCIETY

To promote the understanding and appreciation for all fine literature, classic and contemporary, is the chief aim of the Caroline Hewins Literary Society, named in honor of the famous children's librarian. Under the guidance of Miss Elizabeth Haselton and president Ruth Greenwald, each meeting usually includes a book review by one of the members, or a report by some speaker. In this way the program of the C.H.L.S. complements the course of literature in the classroom.

FRENCH CLUB

As in other years, the French Club has tried to promote interest in and understanding of the language and culture of France. At the meetings, under the leadership of president Ellen Finley, "on ne parle que le francais". The club, of which Miss Esther Phillips is faculty adviser, presents French songs, plays games, and records. Such meetings give experience in conversational French and further background for the classics.

GIRLS' BUSINESS CLUB

Organized in 1925, the Girls' Business Club has one of the oldest and finest histories of all the clubs in Weaver. Each year a banquet for alumni of the club is held. During the year, the meetings, presided over by president Claire Howell and adviser, Miss Marion Case, hear speakers from the leading businesses of the city.

GIRLS' LEADERS' CLUB

The Girls' Leaders' Club, under the direction of Miss Eleanor Whitney, assists the girls' physical education teacher. Their main duty is to give individual help to the girls in their appointed squads. The leaders also arrange for and plan Play Days and other social activities. The highlight of the program for 1946 was the combined Leaders' Corps party, the first of its kind held in the gym. The 1946 program's success was due to the outstanding ability of Rosemary Conderino, president, and Jean Lombardo, ex-president.

INGLESIDE CLUB

The Ingleside Club is composed of girls in the home economics classes who are exceptionally interested in activities related to the course. Miss Portia Clough is faculty adviser. Margaret Diamond was president of the club in 1946.

LATIN CLUB

The Concilium Romanum seeks to facilitate knowledge of Rome, the Latin language, and the Romans. Consul Irma Horn and Miss Genevieve Conkin head this organization of thirty. Sight translations and records of famous Latin speeches and literature give a reality to Latin at the meetings. Roman holidays are celebrated at various meetings as close to the Roman dates as possible. In these ways, Rome and Latin become real and alive.

THE LOOKOUT

Those busy scribblers you've seen scurrying around with pencil and paper are not tourists—they're the loyal scribes for "The Lookout" and Editor Carol Kagan. The latest school news, the dances, assemblies, scholarships, honors, awards, and gossip are duly recorded with the help of Miss Dorothy Hood, adviser. Famed for its rogues' gallery and the screams from the Scoop Department, "The Lookout" is a very popular publication at Weaver.

MODEL AIRPLANE CLUB

The Model Airplane Club is an organization of those students who are interested in studying and building airplane models. The finished models are later entered in local meets. Mr. Leonard French is the club's faculty adviser. Richard Laschever, president for 1946, directed the meetings.

PROJECTION SQUAD

You say you have moving pictures you want to have shown? You say you need some one to run the machine? Tell you what I'm going to do—get the Projection Squad! Composed of twelve members, four boys from each class, these twelve fellows are the Seabees of Weaver. They direct traffic during fire drills, and, under the able direction of Miss Mae Drescher, have charge of the camera and sound-track during assemblies and special programs in Room 300.

THE RECORD CLUB

The Record Club is a new addition to our list of extra-curricular activities. Under the presidency of Marie Kramer, and with faculty adviser Mr. F. Chapman, the club has a three-fold purpose. The first is to promote better understanding and appreciation of classical music among Weaver students. The second aim is to build a record library in Weaver High for the use of faculty, club members, and the student body. And lastly the club provides musical entertainment for the members.

SPECIAL SERVICE SQUAD

The Special Service Squad performs such necessary duties around the school grounds as caring for the flag, assisting during fire drills, and many other services. The squad is under the supervision of Miss Faith Talcott.

"Three Years of Music"

The three years that we have spent at Weaver have been highlighted by concerts, dances, and assemblies, featuring a great variety of music. To begin with, the glee club, band, and orchestra, together under the direction of Mr. Green, gave one enjoyable concert every year, usually sometime in April. To hear the combined groups playing and singing "Kiss Me Again", as they did in 1944, one would know that a great deal of work must have gone on during the rehearsals of the year. But there are many afternoons of fun as well as hard work to be remembered by the members, such as when the girls practiced "Tea for Two" that was such a success in the concert of 1945. On that night, and in the concert of 1946, the girls were dressed in many-colored gowns and made a very lovely picture as they sang. The band was always ready to play at the football and basketball games and at assemblies.

Another musical event in the spring of the year was the inter-high choir, led first by Mr. Price, and in 1946 by Mr. Hintz. There were about 600 singers each year on the Bushnell stage, the girls all in white, and the boys in black. For a soloist one year Anna Kaskas sang, and on another occasion, William Hain. "Song of Victory" was considered the favorite selection by the group and the audience, and hence was sung both years.

The A Cappella Choir, consisting of the best singers from the high schools of Hartford, sang at Weaver and the other high schools at Christmas each year. But it was a busy group during the rest of the time, as well. This choir sang at the Bond Hotel for the Rotary Club, over the radio at Christmas, at St. Joseph's College, and for its own concert at West Middle School for the members' friends and relatives. During the year the rehearsals were at Hartford High, and there were always visitors to be seen, listening to the group practice "I am Music", "Lullaby On Christmas Eve", or some of the many other selections. Sometimes these visitors were singers, teachers, students from other schools or alumni of the A Cappella. Their presence shows the constant and wide interest in the choral group.

Weaver was represented in the New England Festival at New Britain, the All-State Chorus at Bridgeport, and the All-State Band at Bushnell Memorial. Those who took part received not only valuable training in music but a great deal of enjoyment as well.

All of these groups held important places in the activities of Weaver and gave something worthwhile to the school—some really fine music that we will always remember.

Annual Band Concert — 1946

As We Were

It is the year 1960, and we are going over the memories of our high school days. We remember that day when we peeked cautiously into the room where the "Portal" was being compiled. We can see it all now, Lenny Hellerman perched high above the figures down below; he is on the chandelier, aiming his camera at the back of artist Matthew Gelfand's head, but Matthew is the nervous type; he will not stay still long enough for the picture to be taken. He must walk in circles until he is dizzy enough to produce one of his works of art! Nina Frascarelli and Margaret Freeman can be seen busily scribbling away at something which they will presently add to the overburdened wastebasket. One reason why their time and energy are to no avail is that Margaret has spring fever, and all she can think about is Friday night when she'll have time to stay home and finish that good book she's been reading.(?) The other reason is that Nina can't concentrate; she's too close to Arthur Lapp, who is laughing heartily at his own jokes in a masterpiece he has just cooked up. They soon wring their hands, spring from their chairs, and go over to watch Rosalie Poriss and Anne Flanagan. These two little Beavers are gazing soulfully out of the window and then back into each other's eyes, as they try to think of a new adjective, to describe one of Weaver's many tall, dark, and . . . , in his write-up. But since they have used "cute" exactly 165 times this afternoon, they decide "adorable" can take its place. Nearby we see Merrill Stein and Charles Bostick, hugging each other tenderly, as tears of affection flow down their cheeks. It seems they have just completed super articles which they know will please Mr. Larrabee, who is giggling to himself softly as he plays tiddly winks in the middle of the floor. Diane Anderson is watching him sadly, shaking her head and muttering under her breath. We now see Doris Rosenstein, explaining in a soft, but firm voice, to the typists, Sabia Donatelli, Phyllis Vail, and Jane Fontana, that they must not type VAN JOHNSON, in caps, between each paragraph. The figure with his forehead and knees to the ground and the rest of him up is Harvey Glass. The low moans coming from his mouth are "New Ideas for The Portal", and he thinks best in this position. Presently he rises sedately, with the help of Peter Riemer, who keeps his head bowed reverently, and walks with musing gait to his gold-plated desk where he picks up his pink quill and begins to write his solemn thought. Irma Horn, with her eyes gleaming and hair standing on end, is busy doing the teachers' write-ups. She is chained to her desk for safety's sake but hasn't bitten anyone since the day she began her work. Matthew still paces on, as Lila Helman stands nearby, on her face a rapt look of wonder. Across the room, Merrill and Charles have changed their attitude toward one another and are arguing as to which one of their names should appear first on a new article, while Gwen Morrison is deciding whether or not to offer her assistance as referee. With her nose buried in an old "Portal", Mildred Pollack reads the sage sayings of the misty year of 1943. And so we leave this scene of busy little people, working for the Cause.

Crime never pays!

The Filming of the Shrews

The year—1961

The time—Twilight

The scene—My Mansion

I'm glad you turned this page because I was just going downstairs to my "rec" room to see the newsreel. Yes, it sure is swell since Bob "slashed" Katz and Lens Hellerman, radio and film magnates respectively, have combined their corporations to put on a telereel every evening. Now everyone can see the news at home with this television set patented by Bob Stone. Well, here we are. It doesn't take long to get anywhere in the house with the moving floors designed by A. David Reiner. Sit down here beside me. Comfortable? (I can't forget that movie.)

"Good evening, everyone. This is your favorite announcer, Norm P. Tulin, speaking to you from station W.H.S., Utopia. Before our telereel, we shall have a brief message from our sponsor."

"It was just a neighborhood prance
That's all that it was, but oh, what it seemed to be;
I was in heaven all the evening,
For being a bright boy,
I had eaten Yaconiello's spaghetti."

"Thank you, Mr. Sklar. Now on to the show. First, a speech by newly-elected President Charlie Bostick, seen here with his most trusted adviser, Hercules Nezames, and his bodyguard, Allan Rock."

"My friends, with me as your president, we shall go far. In fact, I shall be the first to go."

"We switch now to Steve Goldblatt and the world of sports."

"Good evening. Captured here in Grisevich Stadium by star cameraman Ken Miller, we see the remarkable play which has led the Premavone football team to the top position it holds today. The signals are called, but you in the seeing audience will be able to discern only a blur, for the play is too fast for us to photograph. However, coming down the field, Toro and Griffith are seen lateraling the ball, shaking all tacklers. Crossing into the end zone, we see both boys holding the ball. Who will get the credit for the touchdown? Listen and see tomorrow, same station, same scene.

Who will get the credit for the touchdown? Listen and see tomorrow, same station, same scene.

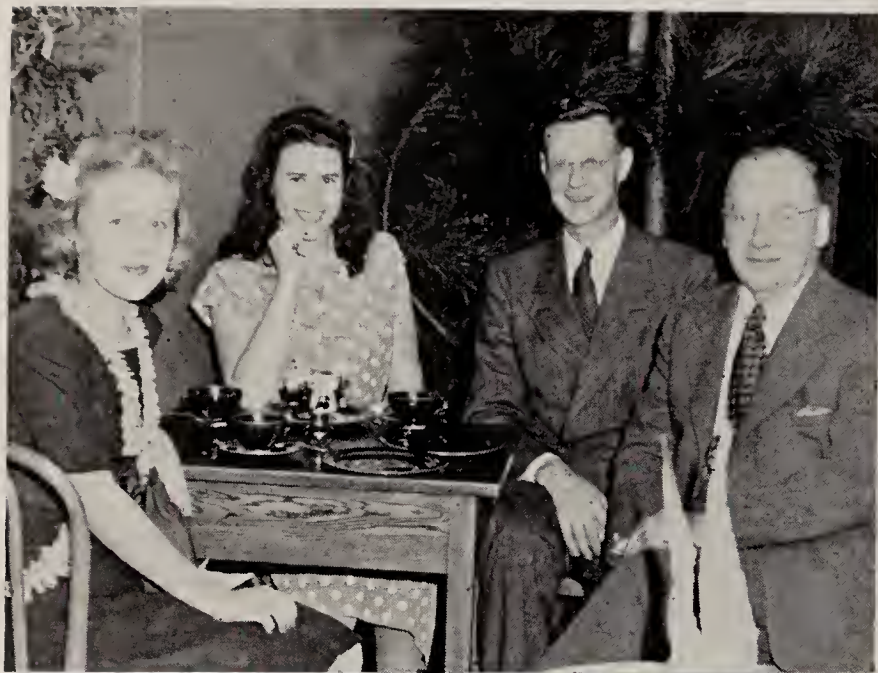

"Shifting to another phase of sports, we see that winter playboy, Russ J. Kone. Look at his poise and stance as he gets ready to go down the ski jump. There's the signal. Look at him go! Down . . . down . . . down; now up . . . up . . . up and away. Notice that form as he flies so gracefully into space. Watch the way . . . wait a minute . . . something's wrong. The wind's changing, and he's off balance. He's falling . . . watch out . . . o-h-h-h-h. He fell right into farmer John Hogan's pigpen. Does your ham taste different lately?"

"And now the K and H spotlight points with pride to the world of entertainment. Here we have announcer Ebba Melrose with the latest news."

Utopia across the street

"Robert Sisk, manager of North Hall, announced last week, that John Sambuco would thrill millions again with his violin, after returning from his world tour. However, while pilot Sandra Cohen was busy making her helmet look more chic, the rocket ship in which the maestro was flying overshot its mark, and is now half-way to the moon. Therefore, it will take them at least five minutes to return, unless they are using Andrews' Activated Accelerated Atomic Fuel. In that case, they will return in four minutes and fifty-nine seconds. In his place, we see that man with the mustache, Jerry Colona a-n-d Jimmy Durante. Oh, no, my mistake. That's Herm Shemonsky and Al Kone. Do you hear that music from backstage? Yes, that's right. It's Bob Cagenello and his Beatouts."

*Mr. Burke and Mr. Green seem happy
The cheer leaders are versatile*

Marilyn Peck's All-Girl Band has a 366-day engagement. Critics Irma Horn and Lorraine Gross presented Shirley Zieky and Charles Prete with the Marie I. Kramer Jitterbugging Award.

"Now we go to the Hill Playhouse, where the premiere of Rosalie Poriss' new play is being held. What a crowd here tonight! Ah, photographers everywhere. There's one now, snapping socialites Iris Frank, Perry Lewis, Diane Anderson, Clarence Banks, Ellen Finley, and Bob Allen. And now for the performance with Margie Santerson and George Sottile, recognized as the world's most . . . , in the leading roles. Yes, it was a wonderful drama. Read tomorrow's 'News and Views' by Lila Helman for full descriptions.

"And now for my special feature, Lappen's Question Box, in which I collect bits of dirt from here and there. (Aside) Not yet, Meyer! Is it true that Leah Kahan is expecting some-

"Here's Saul Lappen with the latest news from the fantastic maze of Night Life."

"Hello, suckers. I really have the dope for you tonight. (Aside) Sit down, Meyer, not yet! Here in the heart of down town Utopia at Evans Eating Emporium, something busted out all over tonight. (Aside) I said sit down, Meyer! Swoon-crooner Phil Gold caused the 'Big Acorns', (formerly the 'L'l Acorns') Dot Novarr, Adele Spitalnick, Rayna Wenick, Rita Schwartz, and Iz Brown to faint and fall in their Milt Corn martinis, successor to the Burpsi-Booma drink. Sensational news for gossip columnist Shirley Lay, of the Kagan Evening Wind (a paper once known as The Daily Blow)! In the confusion, before M.C. Art Lapp could stop him, bouncer Jean Berard tossed Phil out into the street. His spot on the stage was taken by tap-dancer Howie Rorhlich. Next, Max Saul did a quick burlesque on a baseball game, but as Philadelphia, coached by Pete Riemer, lost again, Max took a fit. Consequently, Al Erisoty and Jim Edwards neatly flipped the poor fellow into the lap of debutante Sydelle Wax, sitting at a nearby table with Arnie Grossman. This only increased Max's convulsions, and his face turned Amber. No one was surprised, as this is Forever happening. Sydelle left a moment ago anyway, just as slinky Diane Mandell was coming on stage for her torch number. (Aside) Sit down, Meyer!

"Another great event took place at Dom Cieri's Dance Palladium where thing? We think she'll get that music scholarship yet. Is it true that Audrey Galena was taking dictation on executive Marvin Rauch's lap? Janitor Bob Sanders, who can mop a floor faster than you can say Thomas Snell Weaver High School, supplied us with that bit of news. See you tomorrow night, folks!"

"Announcer Edwin Lassman presents the diplomatic situation."

"The latest word in foreign circles is the outcome of the trip of Ambassadors Ross and Salsburg. After spending five years abroad, they have refused to be photographed, for they have a mysterious partner who wishes to remain anonymous, but whose initials are M.G.C. However, this M.G.C. has issued a statement which all other travelers have agreed is true. It is 'People are no good!'"

"This is Richard Gabriel Laschever speaking to you from the galleries . . . art, that is. Ah-h-h-h-h yes, there's good news here today. Let us look at these beautiful canvasses. The people swear that they are Rembrandts, the artists swear that they are originals, and the critics swear. Here's one with the name Weinberg, engraved with one of the new atomic pencils, specially designed for a lazy man by Joel Kalafa. That's funny. It looks like a portrait of some of the Martians recently discovered by George Deranian on his trip there, but it's entitled 'Modern Art of 1946'. Here's one by Thelma Levin named 'The Confused Lover', modeled by Bill Braem. This last one by Matthew Gelfand seems to be the most sensible of the lot. Oh, no, another mistake. It's wrong side up."

"Now into the fashion realm as reported by style authority Selma Lipsy and announcer Helen Kelly."

"Tonight, we're speaking from the arena around the corner of Hollywood Boulevard, Madison Square Garden, which has been converted by Mildred Weinberg into the earth's most fashionable theater. Even outer atmosphere beings have come to view this spectacle over Saturday and Sunday, and have returned to talk about 'The Last Weekend'. Coming down the runway of the stage are seen the models of the J. Miller Agency, known the world over for their beautiful hair, and (hubba, hubba!!). Among those exhibiting the latest styles in evening suits, afternoon suits, and bathing suits are Analee Gelman, Mona Baidack, Anne Flanagan, Margaret Freeman, and Ruth Greenwald. Whew-w-w-w! In the rear of the theater, our roving eyes catch sight of Elsie Colandro, designer of the clothes being modeled tonight, chatting with Bob Gay, famous explorer. Off at the other side of the theater, we can see 'Doc', and Ray, voted the typical American couple. Ah . . . love! Wonderful, isn't it? Well, that's the end of tonight's fashion show, and the end of the K. and H. telereel for tonight. We'll be seeing you tomorrow."

Speaking of "Art", remember Weaver night?

A one-act play

Characters: Anonymous A in a Green mask
Anonymous B in a White mask

Scene: Back room (113) of a local high school

Time: Just as Portals are being distributed

A (nervously touching a match to some papers in the wastebasket): "Ya got the tickets?"

B (in a hoarse whisper): "Yeah, to Anaheim, Mazooza, and Cookamunga, which is the farthest place from here I could t'ink of, Boss!"

A (trying to bite all ten fingernails at once): "And what about those letters to spill the dope to the authorities?"

B (peeking through the keyhole of the barricaded door): "I took care of 'em, Boss!"

A (flying into a rage): "Ya know I don't wanna take the rap for this all alone! We gotta pin the job on the rest of 'em, too!" (At this moment, a great roar is heard offstage as hundreds of students start reading their Portals.)

"Who did you blame? Hurry up! We gotta get outa here!"

B: "I took care of Mr. Larrabee and Mr. Cunningham first. They're old hands in dis racket, and dey engineered the whole t'ing! Den I fixed Miss Helen Haselton and Mr. Preu. After all, Boss, dis t'ing might not have happened, if dey didn't work so hard in the Art Department. And den dey had a lot of accomplices, too, so I turned 'em all in.

There was Matthew Gelfand, Hannah Kirschbaum, Marvin Bachner, Elsie Colandro, Elbert Weinberg, Thelma Levin, Merrill Fischer, Leatrice Margolis, Steven Goldblatt, Larry Fiorita, Rita Kinsler, Maria Kolosky, Margaret McLeod, Alex Erisoty, and Harold Sailor."

A: "Good! We'll turn all them names in and beat it out of here!" (At this moment, a great rumbling is heard offstage as hundreds of students try to get into the barricaded room.)

"And make sure of Len Hellerman and Lenny Shechtman — they handled most of the photography on this deal!"

B (mopping his forehead as the pounding of a battering ram is heard against the door): "I just remembered! Mr. Jack Brown, of the Hammersmith-Kortmeyer Printing Company. He's as much to blame as anyone else, eh, Boss?"

A (scribbling a note): "What about that newspaper?"

B (surprised): "Ya mean da Lookout, Boss?" (Breaks into tears.)

A: "I don't care how much you love 'em, Mat — (whoops!), THEY gotta go up the river, too! Didn't they have a hand in this?"

B (sobbing jerkily while wiping his eyes with an old Lookout): "Yeah, I s'pose so."

A (deftly knotting some old Lookouts together to make a rope for their escape out the window): "I'll leave this note on the table." (Puts note scribbled on back of a demerit slip on table.) "Now come on, before that crowd gets us!"

(Exeunt via backstage window as howling, screaming, bloodthirsty mob breaks into their room.) The mob leader picks up the note which says: "All quips in The Portal were composed for humor's sake, and no harm was meant to anyone".

(The whole crowd laughs and goes home happily — we hope!)

WHICH WAY ARE YOU GOING AFTER GRADUATION FROM HIGH SCHOOL?

Right after graduation, how would you like to step into a job that gives you good pay . . . gives you an opportunity to study one or more of 200 skills and trades including such advanced sciences as aviation, radar, television, electronics, radio, jet propulsion, atomic science . . . permits you to travel to the far corners of the world . . . gives you 30 days' vacation with pay every year . . . provides you with food, clothing, quarters, medical and dental care . . . pays allowances to your dependents . . . offers many more attractive advantages . . . and enables you to retire with a life income any time after 20 years? Believe it or not, that job is open to you right now if you enlist in the U. S. Army. You can learn and earn at the same time. You can attend Army training schools and specialize in courses which will put you away out ahead in a career in later life. Under the GI Bill of Rights, if you enlist for 3 years, you may have 48 months of college, or business, or trade school education with tuition up to $500 per ordinary school year paid and $65 a month living allowance ($90 if you are married) paid by the Government. Match this against other opportunities open to you today. It's one you can't afford to miss. Certainly you'll want to get all the facts — and the pay figures are worth seeing, too. Stop in at the Army Recruiting Station and find out all about it.
